Presented by:

The Hampton Roads Society for Human Resource Management & Saint Leo University

March 29, 2016, 10:15 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

Meyera E. Oberndorf Central Library

4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Virginia Beach, VA 23452-1767

Event is free and open to the public. To register and for more information please visit www.saintleo.edu/hrshrm

This timely and interactive session will focus on the mindset of the active shooter and the identification of his or her potential "red flags" prior to the event. Situational preparedness and cognitive thought must occur in every workplace and recreational environment in order to minimize the threat and maximize survivability. Critical information will be shared with attendees that will create this much needed attentiveness, understanding, and awareness.

Upon completion of this seminar, attendees will:

- ❖ Recognize potential threats prior to the evolution of violence
- ❖ Examine survival strategies and threat minimization
- ❖ Evaluate the concept of Run-Hide-Fight
- ❖ Determine and define their personal level of preparedness

SHRM and HRCI 2 hours of recertification has been applied for.
